The upper zone of the handwriting is like the upper portion of the human body. The head or more precisely, the brain is used in thinking and intellectual activities like imagination, philosophy, opinions, dreams and all the emotional ideas like ego, jealousy, etc. All these things are represented by the upper zone of the handwriting.

The letter f is the only letter in the English language that has all the three different zones. The upper part of the letter f would correspond to the writer's brain or intellectual level, the middle part would correspond to the day to day living and finally the lower part would reflect the writer's attitude towards earthly desires. But this was as far as the letter f is concerned, but what about the other letters. For that let us examine each zone in detail, to get some better answers.
